| In-school barriers (issues to be addressed in school, such as poor oral language skills)          |                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| A.                                                                                                       | A high % of children have poor oracy skills on arrival at school. At Beech this is due to mainly to high deprivation rates and at Luck lane this is due to English as an additional language. |
| B.                                                                                                       | Self esteem, confidence and willingness to persevere is often a barrier to learning.                                                                                                          |

Allocate a Lead Teacher for Oracy. (KT) | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>As a school it is felt that the art of oracy has been overshadowed by other curriculum areas over the past few years. It is understood that marginalising oracy has had a detrimental impact on the standards throughout the curriculum. Furthermore the children entering EYFS have a lower level of Speech and Language when compared to cohorts a few years ago. These conditions coupled with children changing their play habits because of technology mean that oracy must become a focus for our children.</li> <li>The EEF project has researched oracy in a year 7 class in 2013. There was some measureable success and several recommendations. It is these recommendations accompanied with the the core activities that will give us a measurable outcome.</li> </ul> | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>KT lead on this is delivering training on how to use a scale to measure good levels of oracy.</li> <li>Scales to be used when the children are speaking publicly during each REAL Project.</li> </ul> | KT/EBS     | TermlyMinimal costing            |
